Ireland's third National Action Plan for the implementation of UNSCR 1325 and related resolutions

2019 – 2024

My approach to peace-building involves not just political leaders, but all of civil society, including women. Without their full support and participation, no peace agreement can succeed.

Foreword

by An Tánaiste and Minister for Foreign Affairs and Trade,
Simon Coveney TD

Ireland is committed to putting women and girls at the heart of our work to prevent and resolve conflict. Ensuring that peace is forged on the basis of rights, equality and inclusion, is an expression of Ireland's values but also our strategic interest.

Ireland's third National Action Plan renews our commitment to the implementation of the Women, Peace and Security agenda of the UN Security Council, recognising the distinct impact of conflict on women and girls and the importance of women's participation in conflict and post-conflict situations.

The Action Plan sets out our strategy and actions for the next five years and is closely aligned with A Better World, Ireland's new international development policy, which includes gender equality as one of its four priorities.

We are committed to strengthening our work and increasing our funding to Women, Peace and Security across four pillars: prevention, participation, protection and promotion. We will build on strengths from previous plans, including monitoring and evaluation; sharing our experience with other countries on the development and implementation of our NAP; continuing to address the root causes of conflict; and the prevention of and protection from gender based violence in conflict settings. We are committed to strengthening women's representation and gender perspectives in all of our peace and security work, with particular focus on disarmament and non-proliferation fora, and peacekeeping. We will also widen our focus to address the underlying discriminatory gender norms and broader inequalities which often underpin violence and increase our focus on young people and their inclusion in this agenda. We will amplify our voice and the voices of women, increasing and deepening our promotion of the WPS agenda.

Women won their place at peace talks in Northern Ireland through their own determined efforts. The cross-community and cross-generational work of women peacebuilders on the island of Ireland continues today. It is disappointing that Northern Ireland remains the exception rather than the rule when it comes to the level of women's participation in the Peace Processes. We are determined that WPS remains an integral part of continued peacebuilding on the island of Ireland.

Ireland is a country of increasingly rich diversity, and a growing number of women currently living here are from conflict or post conflict affected areas. The plan seeks to ensure that the particular needs of women who have experienced conflict are taken into account in the services provided in order to support their relief and recovery from the trauma of conflict.

We recognise the importance of meaningful participation of people of all ages, communities, and backgrounds, within Peace and Security discussions. I am proud of the wide consultation process which took place to develop this plan and the diverse membership of the Working Group which led its development. We have heard from women and men from across the island of Ireland including members of new communities and from our international partners. These voices have enriched and strengthened this plan.

Driven by both conviction and experience, Ireland, as a global champion on WPS and as an aspiring member of the UN Security Council, is determined to progress implementation of the WPS Agenda through this Plan, from grassroots to global institutions. We are mindful that during the lifetime of this NAP we will mark 20 years since the adoption of the first Women, Peace and Security resolution (UNSCR1325.) and yet, the implementation gap remains regrettably large. The WPS resolutions must move beyond rhetoric to reality. It's long past time - let's play our part.

*An Tánaiste and Minister for Foreign Affairs and Trade,
Simon Coveney TD*

Foreword

by Minister of State for the Diaspora and International Development,
Ciarán Cannon TD

Ireland's previous National Action Plans on Women, Peace and Security have been very effective, with their successful implementation putting gender equality at the heart of Ireland's foreign policy. This third National Action Plan on Women, Peace and Security is a further step on that journey, at home and abroad.

In February 2019, the Government launched A Better World, Ireland's new policy for international development: A Better World places gender equality as one of Ireland's four priorities for our international development work, together with climate action, reducing humanitarian need and strengthening governance. A Better World also commits Ireland to strengthening gender equality across three clusters of interventions – food, protection and people.

Ireland, with Kenya, played a central role in the process which agreed the Sustainable Development Goals, which provide the context for A Better World's focus on the furthest behind first. Gender equality, as both an objective and driver of sustainable development, is the foundation on which the achievement of the SDGs will be built and, of course, is at the core of this third National Action Plan on Women, Peace and Security.

In this context, I would like to highlight SDG 5, on gender equality, and SDG 16, on promoting peaceful and inclusive societies. These are mutually reinforcing: promoting and protecting gender equality helps create more just, peaceful and inclusive societies. Over the last 5 years, 15 of the 20 countries that experienced the largest improvement in their internal Global Peace Index scores also showed improvements in the "gender inequality" indicator.

In 2017, the OECD Development Assistance Committee reported that approximately 86% of Ireland's international development funding made a significant contribution to gender equality and women's empowerment. We are committed to building on this strong base through the implementation of the third National Action Plan on Women, Peace and Security.

Our commitments include increasing allocations directly related to gender equality and scaling up our investments. These include strengthening women's voices in political decision-making; increasing engagement with and funding for women's organisations and movements; and, intensifying work on gender-based violence and protection.

A Better World also commits Ireland to expanding and deepening our work on sexual and reproductive health and rights, increasing work on women's economic empowerment and increasing investment in education with a particular focus on girls' education.

Without improving access to food, water, healthcare, and education for women and girls, and working to protect them from gender based violence, the chances of achieving their meaningful participation in decisions which affect them diminish greatly. Ireland's contribution to gender equality recognises that achieving political representation and power is inextricably linked to women's socio-economic representation and power. This is at the heart of the third National Action Plan on Women, Peace and Security, which also acknowledges the interconnections between its domestic and international dimensions.

Partnership has underpinned the development of this third National Action Plan on Women, Peace and Security. It will also be central to its implementation. We are committed to working with other Government departments, with civil society, with multilateral organisations and in multilateral forums in delivering the Plan, with our membership of the European Union an important strength.

Ireland's partnership approach recognises that men and boys are integral to the realisation of the Women, Peace and Security Agenda.

When we listen and heed women's voices, we all win: if we ignore women's voices, we all lose out. Looking to the 25th anniversary of the Beijing Platform for Action, it is time to move from gender inequality to gender justice: Ireland, including implementation of this third National Action Plan on Women, Peace and Security, is committed to playing its part.

Executive Summary

A more peaceful, equal and sustainable world is the overarching goal of Ireland's foreign policy. We know that building lasting peace is not possible without building a more equal and inclusive society. One of the most fundamental aspects of this is achieving gender equality and equal rights for all women and girls.

Peace agreements which are forged with women at the table are more likely to last, while societies which strive for gender equality are more likely to be peaceful. Women led the process of building peace in Northern Ireland and they continue to support peacebuilding across the world.

Ireland's third National Action Plan (NAP) on UNSCR 1325, the Women, Peace and Security Agenda, forms a central element of our broader commitment to gender equality which is a priority in Ireland's foreign policy, reflected in both The Global Island and the new policy for international development, A Better World.¹

The NAP commits Ireland to recognising the particular adverse effects of conflict on women and girls; to prioritising gender equality in all aspects of our engagement in international peace and security and conflict-affected and fragile contexts; and to championing women's right to equal participation and their important role as leaders in all peacebuilding processes. Our commitment to gender equality includes ensuring that we have an overarching focus on gender equality in all of our partnerships and interventions, and in deepening our understanding of the gendered-impacts of poverty, inequality, climate change and conflict.

It aligns with fulfilling the objectives set out in UN Security Council Resolution (UNSCR) 1325 and its eight related resolutions.² It also forms a central aspect of Ireland's commitment to achieving the 2030 Sustainable Development Goals (Annex III) as well as our obligations under the Convention on the Elimination of all forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW). Throughout the drafting process for this National Action Plan, we have been conscious that progress on the Women, Peace and Security (WPS) Agenda globally has simply been too slow. The 20th Anniversary of UNSCR 1325 in 2020 serves as a timely reminder to the global community to redouble efforts for WPS to reach its transformative potential.

Building on the ambitions set out in previous plans, this NAP outlines our commitment to ensuring an overarching focus on gender equality in all that we do and say. This ranges from our work in disarmament and non-proliferation to supporting locally led community-based peacebuilding work and changing social norms to end gender-based violence. It also uniquely includes domestic commitments to support women and girls affected by the Northern Ireland conflict and the migrant population in Ireland from conflict-affected settings. Our engagement in discussions on peace, security, conflict prevention, disarmament and peacebuilding will recognise not only the rights and needs of women and girls and their important roles as leaders, but also addresses the gender norms and inequalities that underpin violence, inequality and conflict. This includes empowering women and girls to equitably and meaningfully participate in peace and security discussions, and supporting their protection and recovery from all conflict-related harms. This is in line with our overarching focus on reaching the furthest behind first.

This NAP formulates an ambitious vision, across nine strategic outcomes, for a range of diverse interventions across four pillars - Prevention, Participation, Protection and Promotion.

In striving to achieve this vision, we will work across and in partnership both with other Government departments and with civil society, internationally and domestically. Ireland is committed to increasing our efforts and momentum on WPS over the next five-year period, mid 2019 – mid 2024.

Key highlights, new initiatives and strengthened commitments of this plan include:

- » Increasing our funding for WPS;
- » Women and gendered perspectives at the centre of our multilateral diplomacy including in the context of Ireland's candidature to, and prospective membership of, the UN Security Council for the 2021–2022 term;
- » Taking a comprehensive approach to conflict prevention incorporating gender analysis and perspectives;
- » Enhanced advocacy and communication on WPS, including through lesson sharing and focus contexts;
- » Increasing the robustness of monitoring and evaluation (including through CEDAW);
- » Strengthening the domestic dimension of the NAP;
- » Challenging discriminatory gender norms and enhancing the engagement of men and boys in supporting the WPS Agenda;
- » Prioritising the inclusion of women and their perspectives in disarmament, arms control and non-proliferation discussions;
- » Recognising the many roles and identities people have and how these impact societies in conflict;
- » Amplifying the voices of young people.

The United Nations Security Council Resolution (UNSCR) 1325, was adopted in 2000, and marked a watershed moment when the international community recognised the particular impact of conflict on women and girls. UNSCR 1325 has been reinforced by eight subsequent resolutions and is structured around thematic pillars. The Women, Peace and Security (WPS) Agenda recognises both the particularly adverse effect of conflict on women and girls, as well as their critical role in conflict prevention, peace negotiations, peacebuilding, mediation, and governance.

Background and Context

Ireland has already implemented two National Action Plans on Women, Peace and Security. Ireland's first NAP was launched in 2011. Its development was built on a unique cross learning initiative and consultation involving Liberia, Timor Leste and the island of Ireland and provided the foundation for Ireland's initiatives on WPS. Since adoption, the WPS Agenda has been focused around pillars that provide an operational framework for the WPS Agenda and Ireland has used this structure to focus our plans. Ireland's second NAP was launched in 2015 and was based on the pillars of Prevention, Participation, Protection and Promotion. Each pillar defined a number of objectives along with clear actions, targets, and timeframes. Both previous plans were drafted following a public consultation process with sustained involvement from civil society.

These plans worked to combat Gender-Based Violence (GBV) and Sexual Exploitation and Abuse (SEA), address impunity, and increase women's participation in all levels of decision-making and peacebuilding. The second NAP's built-in monitoring mechanisms, most notably its Oversight Group, and the unique dual focus on the international and domestic agendas, were highlighted as an example of best practise by both the United Nations and the European Union. Ireland has added an important perspective to the UN's efforts to include women in peace processes and negotiations by sharing the experiences of women affected by conflict on the island of Ireland. While there have been many successes across the pillars, there is global recognition that less progress has been made on conflict prevention, including ensuring gender perspectives are mainstreamed in all these efforts.

This third plan takes into account the recommendations of evaluations and reviews of the previous plans and the changing and increasingly complex nature of contemporary conflict. It reflects a strengthened focus on ensuring an integrated and holistic approach to conflict prevention, the conclusions of the UN 2015 Global Study on the implementation of the WPS Agenda³, the agreement of the UN Sustainable Development Goals, and the adoption of the EU Strategic Approach⁴ to WPS.

Methodology

Ireland's third National Action Plan has been informed by the following:

THE FINDINGS OF THE MID-TERM AND FINAL REVIEW OF THE SECOND NATIONAL ACTION PLAN

Mid-Term and Final Reviews on Ireland's second NAP were conducted to evaluate the progress and challenges of implementation.⁵ Recommendations from these reviews including extending the third plan to five years, the adoption of a logic model, and the importance of accountability and reporting through strengthening the "whole of government" approach have been taken on board (Annex 1).

THE FORMATION OF A WORKING GROUP

A Working Group comprised of balanced representation from statutory bodies, civil society and academic experts with relevant experience of the WPS Agenda was established for the development of the NAP. Nominations were sought from the Oversight Group of the second NAP and members were appointed by the Tánaiste and Minister for Foreign Affairs and Trade. There was a focus on diversity and inclusion within the nomination process. The group's role was to advise and inform the development of the third NAP. It had an independent Chairperson and the Conflict Resolution Unit provided a Secretariat.⁶

AN OPEN, TRANSPARENT AND RIGOROUS PUBLIC CONSULTATION

Written submissions were invited from the public and 48 submissions were received⁷. Three consultative workshops were organised, two in Cork⁸ and one in Dublin.⁹ Overall, the number of individuals and organisations which were involved in the consultation process was twice that of the previous NAP consultations.¹⁰

A WHOLE OF GOVERNMENT APPROACH

Progress on the WPS Agenda can only be achieved through whole of Government collaboration and co-operation.¹¹

- » The Department of Defence and the Defence Forces, who have developed their own action plan on WPS, will continue to build upon their work on the integration of WPS in UN and UN-mandated overseas peace operations;
- » Units across the Political and Development Cooperation and Africa Divisions in the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade will implement the plan regionally and internationally, in line with the new A Better World development policy;
- » The domestic dimension has emerged as a growing priority for this plan and will be led by the Department of Justice and Equality and An Garda Síochána in conjunction with the Health Service Executive, and for the first time inputs will be provided by the Department of Education and Skills, the Department of Community and Rural Development, and related state agencies.

Pillar Framework

In order to make progress towards this vision, the plan has been designed and structured around four pillars, namely:

- » Prevention
- » Participation
- » Protection
- » Promotion

All of the pillars are interlinking and mutually reinforcing. Fulfilling the ambition and potential of the WPS Agenda requires working on all pillars as they are interdependent. From the pillars flow nine strategic outcomes which identify and set out what Ireland will strive to accomplish within the five-year period. The matrix (Figure 1) identifies what we want to change (impact) and how we aim to achieve this. In Annex 1 you will find what is required to deliver these outcomes (actions) and how we measure the progress that has been made (indicators).

WOMEN, PEACE AND SECURITY

STRATEGIC OUTCOMES

Figure 1

Pillars

Pillar 1: Prevention

Ireland's foreign policy takes an integrated approach to peace and security. Our policy for international development recognises four central policy priorities including gender equality, climate action, strengthening governance and reducing humanitarian need, all of which are essential for eradicating poverty, preventing conflict and building sustainable peace. Our commitment to a comprehensive approach to conflict prevention including addressing root causes will involve:

TACKLING INEQUALITY

Inequality, including gender inequality, is a key driver of conflict. Women's empowerment, economically, socially and politically must be addressed as part of conflict prevention and peacebuilding. We will work to address gender inequality across all areas of our work. This includes tackling root causes, such as unequal power relations, gender stereotypes and practices that perpetuate discrimination against women and girls. The aim of this is to eliminate negative social norms including those that condone Gender-Based Violence (GBV) and attitudes. Ireland will seek to combat inequality and extreme poverty through all aspects of our development and humanitarian work, with a particular focus on reaching the furthest behind first.

ENGAGING MEN AND BOYS

Ireland commits to better understanding the ways in which men and women are perceived differently and how this impacts on society. Discriminatory gender norms refer to the restrictive, frequently unnoticed and often unconscious ways that social norms can be manipulated within societies to inhibit women's equality and participation and perpetuate conflict, including GBV. We understand that there are multiple forms of masculinities within every society, some of which are harmful and are a part of these discriminatory gender norms. We believe in the need to challenge the ways in which discriminatory gender norms, in particular harmful masculinities, can be embedded in peace and security discourse and to broaden discussions to ensure a more holistic human security approach. Ireland will work to address the structural and societal barriers to women's participation in measurable ways. We will support efforts to fully engage men and boys, in addition to political, community and faith leaders at all levels, as agents of change in support of the WPS Agenda and as strategic partners in eliminating all forms of GBV and discrimination against women and girls.

Strategic Outcomes:

- 1.1 Gender equality and women's empowerment is prioritised in all of Ireland's development and humanitarian work, including in conflict affected contexts to deliver A Better World and The Global Island policies.
- 1.2 A gender analysis is integrated into Ireland's work in conflict-affected contexts and on peace and security issues, including in relation to conflict prevention, peacebuilding and security policy and disarmament.
- 1.3 The effects and drivers of harmful masculinities and discriminatory gender norms are addressed, including support for the engagement of men and boys as advocates and stakeholders in WPS.

GENDER ANALYSIS IS INTEGRATED INTO OUR WORK IN CONFLICT-AFFECTED CONTEXTS AND IN PEACE AND SECURITY FORA

The changing nature of conflict and global dynamics since the adoption of UNSCR 1325 has brought new challenges. These include climate change, prolonged mass displacement and migration, increased inequality, cyber related threats, the availability of new technologies of war and the need to prevent violent extremism. Ireland recognises the need to incorporate a gender analysis in all our policy responses to these challenges. Ireland is committed to developing a more comprehensive response to peace and security challenges as part of its foreign policy, recognising the interlinkages between regional, national and local level conflict. Our response will include strengthening local capacity for conflict prevention and peacebuilding.

Commitments to multilateralism, international law and human rights remain cornerstones of our foreign policy and is the key to addressing peace and security challenges. Ireland will continue to work within the international community to build open, representative, transparent and effective international organisations and institutions as drivers of peace with women and gendered perspectives at the centre, including in the context of Ireland's candidature to, and prospective membership of, the UN Security Council for the 2021-2022 term.

Ireland is committed to ensuring that gender analysis and women's leadership is strengthened in governance, conflict prevention, and peacebuilding processes at all levels, as well as in the development of security policy, and disarmament and arms control measures.

DISARMAMENT AS A TOOL FOR PREVENTING CONFLICT

Ireland recognises that there is a clear link between the risk of GBV and the disproportionate impact of weapons, on women and girls in conflict, particularly small arms and light weapons. Women and girls are also disproportionately impacted by the use of nuclear weapons, including as a result of ionising radiation. Ireland will continue to promote the strengthening of disarmament and arms control measures, given our firm belief that this will contribute to the reduction of GBV and acts as a long-term tool for the prevention of conflict, and the recurrence of violence in the post-conflict phase.

Pillar 2: Participation

Participation is a guiding principle for our work on the island of Ireland, regionally and in our international engagement. This plan strives to eliminate barriers to women's meaningful participation through the following:

AN INTERSECTIONAL APPROACH

Women are not a homogenous group and face many and varied forms of discrimination including being a member of religious, cultural, ethnic, LGBTQI+ and migrant communities and as a result of experiencing a disability. This can affect their full and meaningful participation at all levels of decision-making in society. Ireland commits to increasing the active and diverse participation and leadership of women in decision-making roles in political, economic, and social life; in peace and security processes; and in humanitarian action, including in work to prevent crises and reduce humanitarian need and long-term development. This must take into account all barriers to women's participation, including structural violence.¹²

WOMEN'S EMPOWERMENT

The norm of viewing women only as victims limits impacts and can be harmful for women. Ireland recognises women as agents of change. Barriers to women's empowerment can be overcome by having a strategic focus on political participation, supporting women's leadership, expanding women's choices and capabilities and continued access to education and training. Ireland will promote the empowerment of women and girls to take their place as leaders and full and equal participants in its work on peacebuilding and conflict prevention and resolution including mediation, dialogue and protection. Our work on disarmament, non-proliferation and arms control will also be considered from this perspective.

SUPPORTING GRASSROOTS PEACEBUILDING AND MEDIATION

Ireland believes that we must do more to recognise, support and capture the work undertaken by women peacebuilders at local and grassroots levels. We must create avenues for partnership and interlinking local, national, regional and international women's peacebuilding

Strategic Outcomes:

- 2.1 Women are meaningful participants in the Government of Ireland's representation in all peace and security fora, including at senior decision-making and leadership levels.
- 2.2 Women's leadership and meaningful participation in conflict-prevention, resolution, mediation, recovery from conflict, international security, peacebuilding and the disarmament fora is significantly improved including through empowerment.
- 2.3 The empowerment and meaningful participation in decision-making of women on the island of Ireland, including those affected by conflict is demonstrably improved.

efforts, where appropriate. We recognise and commit to addressing challenges faced by women human rights defenders, local women's groups, grassroots women mediators and negotiators.

Our efforts will also focus on the participation of women in grassroots peacebuilding on the island of Ireland. This work will be motivated by the need to see women living in Ireland who have experienced conflict as both agents of change and as a key source of knowledge in understanding conflict prevention and fragile states.

FOCUS ON YOUTH AND INTERGENERATIONAL DIALOGUE

As recognised through the Youth, Peace and Security (YPS) Agenda, the full and equitable inclusion of young people is essential for building sustainable peace. Ireland's work across the participation pillar will include a focus on intergenerational dialogue, building the voice of young people and recognising the intersections between the WPS and YPS Agendas. This will incorporate the need for greater investments in the capacity, agency and leadership of young people.

Pillar 3: Protection

This Pillar encompasses the guarantee of the rights of women to the protection from violence and discrimination at all stages of conflict, and relief and recovery that includes the provision of services to assist in recovery from conflict.

PROMOTION AND PROTECTION OF HUMAN RIGHTS

Women's human rights are the foundation of the WPS Agenda. The protection of human rights and the achievement of gender equality is fundamental in order to reach those furthest behind first and for the creation and maintenance of peaceful societies. We will actively engage in the strengthening of international standards to address gender inequality and protect human rights. In particular Ireland will continue to play a leading role in supporting the protection of human rights defenders and civil society space, while recognising the particular vulnerabilities faced by women human rights defenders.¹³

Accountability is key to protection, including prevention from conflict-related sexual violence. We will continue to advocate for and invest in greater accountability for human rights violations and abuses which occur in conflict settings including supporting the work of the International Criminal Court.

PREVENTION AND PROTECTION FROM GENDER-BASED VIOLENCE

In conflict, women and girls experience a wide range of forms of GBV, including violence as a weapon of war. Women and girls also experience other forms of violence

Strategic Outcomes:

- 3.1 Women's and girls' protection in fragile and conflict-affected contexts and the prevention and combatting of all human rights violations against women, including Sexual Exploitation and Abuse and Gender-Based Violence is ensured.
- 3.2 Institutional mechanisms and services are effectively coordinated and strengthened to ensure the protection, relief, recovery and rehabilitation of women in Ireland affected by conflict.

such as intimate partner violence, female genital mutilation, human trafficking and early and forced marriage.

Ireland's approach to the prevention and protection of women and girls from GBV and SEA recognises the fundamental role of underlying gender inequalities which both fuel and are exacerbated by GBV. It is also important to recognise the role that negative or harmful gender norms and gender inequality play in driving other forms of violence and conflict, including GBV, and the impact of these forms of violence on GBV.

Ireland will intensify our investment in GBV prevention and response which supports transformative change at the individual and community level to end GBV and ensure a comprehensive survivor centred response. Ireland is committed to increasing our investments in gender equality in conflict-affected and fragile states, recognising the interlinkages between gender inequalities, violent conflict and GBV.

Ireland will continue to support capacity building of peacekeepers, partners and civil society in conflict and post-conflict affected countries and contexts and advocate for the eradication of all forms of GBV across all fora of engagement.

PROTECTION FROM SEXUAL EXPLOITATION AND ABUSE

Ireland will also be continuing to work to ensure prevention of, and accountability for, SEA which is perpetrated by peacekeeping, humanitarian and development actors. As a member of the UN Secretary General's Circle of Leadership on Preventing Sexual Exploitation and Abuse and as a signatory to the Voluntary Compact on ending Sexual Exploitation and Abuse, Ireland has actioned the UN's zero tolerance policy with respect to SEA and will continue to both highlight and work towards the elimination of such abuses.

ENSURING GENDER-RESPONSIVE PEACEKEEPING AND PEACEBUILDING

As a UN Member State with over sixty years of continuous peacekeeping experience, Ireland knows well the importance of integrating gender perspectives and empowering women in peacekeeping. Our Department of Defence and Defence Forces' WPS Action Plan, include comprehensive training of peacekeepers on the gendered impacts of conflict, increasing the participation of women in peacekeeping missions, ensuring trained Gender Advisors are deployed to peacekeeping missions and engagement with the UN Peacekeeping architecture to strengthen its gender responsiveness.

HUMAN TRAFFICKING

Human trafficking is best tackled through a unified approach and our legislative and policy framework places an emphasis on the human rights-based and victim-centred approach. Ireland will continue working with our domestic and international partners to protect victims of human trafficking, prosecute the traffickers, and promote partnerships to prevent and combat human trafficking. This will include continued funding, through our development programme, to reduce vulnerability to human trafficking in countries of origin and promote the protection of human rights.

RELIEF AND RECOVERY

Relief and recovery for women who have experienced conflict-related harms includes a commitment to provide or facilitate access to medical, legal, psychosocial and livelihood services, without discrimination. Through our development and humanitarian cooperation, Ireland will continue to support the provision of life-saving response services including psychosocial support and survivor-centred case management services. This includes Ireland's commitment to improving referral pathways and services for GBV survivors as well as expanding access to comprehensive sexual and reproductive health services and rights to women and girls in emergencies. Ireland is particularly committed to increasing its investment for education in emergencies, with a particular focus on girls

We recognise that women who have come from conflict contexts are now living in Ireland and require a diversity of services in order to aid the recovery process. Ireland will take into account the specific needs of victims of SEA, of trauma and torture, including female genital mutilation as recognised and recommended by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees¹⁴ (UNHCR). This includes access to medical services, trauma counselling and access to integration programmes. Ireland commits to preventing any possible re-traumatisation of women from conflict context. We recognise that delivery of these services requires a whole of Government approach and we are committed to increasing our coordination and coherence in supporting the relief, recovery and rehabilitation of women affected by conflict on the island of Ireland.

Pillar 4: Promotion

As a small island state, we recognise that our voice is one of our greatest assets and brings with it responsibilities at home and abroad. The promotion of the WPS Agenda will include:

ADVOCACY

In line with commitments in the Global Island where we plan to double our global footprint (diplomatic influence), we will strengthen our efforts to advocate for the achievement of the WPS Agenda in our region and internationally.

This involves not only raising our own voice in support of the WPS Agenda but also working to raise the voice of women peacebuilders across Ireland and around the world. Through partnerships at the European Union, United Nations and African Union, as well as our partnership with the international financial institutions we will drive collective action to achieve the commitments under the WPS Agenda.

LESSON SHARING

Cooperation and partnership brought peace and prosperity to our island and shapes how we engage with the world today. In light of this we are committed to continuing both sharing our own lessons and experience and learning from others within the WPS Agenda in an effort to prevent conflict and or contribute to sustaining peace around the world.

Strategic Outcomes:

- 4.1 Ireland's commitments and actions on the Women, Peace and Security Agenda, including lesson sharing, is enhanced and demonstrated by advocacy, communication and engagement at local, national, regional and international levels.

COMMUNICATIONS

At home, promotion will involve a greater effort to raise awareness of the WPS Agenda both across government and in reaching out to women affected as a result of conflict and informing them of the services available. Support will be provided for specific outreach and communications for WPS activities under this plan.

HIGHLIGHTING FOCUS CONTEXTS TO DEMONSTRATE OUR WORK

Across its defence, diplomatic, humanitarian and development work numerous examples exist of Ireland's implementation and promotion of the WPS Agenda. Through the lifetime of the third NAP, Ireland is committed to strengthening our WPS work across our Mission network and to demonstrating our impact using specific examples. This next section sets out some of those examples led by our embassies, secretariats and representative offices. These examples were selected because of their existing WPS focus.

Regions

EUROPE

Ireland's Permanent Representation to the European Union, Brussels

As an EU Member State, Ireland works to ensure that the WPS Agenda is integrated in the EU's global engagement. The promotion of WPS and gender equality is a priority across our engagement in the European Union and its Institutions. Ireland is an active member of the EU Informal Taskforce on WPS and works in partnership with other Member States to ensure coherent implementation of the EU Strategic Approach. The EU Strategic Approach places the WPS Agenda at the centre of the full spectrum of the EU Common Foreign and Security Policy, as an essential tool in ensuring that the rights, agency and protection of women and girls are observed and upheld at all times, and to confirm that a meaningful and equitable role in decision-making is secured for women of all ages. We advocate for the inclusion of WPS and gender equality perspectives across our interventions within the EU policy making, budget allocations, programming, and reporting in relation to conflict prevention and peacebuilding, Common Security and Defence Policy (CSDP), and also the Multiannual Financial Framework.

Northern Ireland

It is widely acknowledged that the involvement of women in the Northern Ireland Peace Process has been an essential element in reaching the Good Friday Agreement and in subsequent stages of the Peace Process. Women from all communities and backgrounds at every level of society in Northern Ireland were and continue to be agents for change and peacebuilders in their everyday lives. The Irish Secretariat in Belfast will be essential in contributing to Ireland's outreach and promotion of the WPS Agenda. The Secretariat will hold gender equality as a priority in their wider engagement and will organise regular WPS specific events. The meaningful inclusion and participation of women from all communities and backgrounds and the importance of cross-generational experience sharing will be an essential principle in all of this outreach. The Reconciliation Fund will continue to act as an important tool in the funding of civil society groups whose work supports the promotion of gender equality and the WPS Agenda.

MIDDLE EAST AND NORTH AFRICA

Israel/Palestine

Ireland's engagement on the Middle East conflict (or Middle East Peace Process, MEPP) is driven by the high importance attributed politically to the issue, both by the Irish people and the international community. Gender is a priority for many of the organisations supported by Ireland in the region and this WPS focus will be enhanced and better captured throughout the lifespan of this NAP. Current humanitarian, peacebuilding and developmental actions include:

- » direct support to those most in need through UNRWA to Palestine refugees and to the Palestinian Authority;
- » support to civil society in Israel and Palestine to combat the injustices resulting from the occupation;
- » support partner organisations in the promotion of women's participation in peacebuilding, politics, and protection against GBV. Ireland supported Palestine's second NAP through funding provided to the Palestinian Initiative for the Promotion of Global Dialogue and Democracy (MIFTAH);
- » Israel does not to date have a NAP. Ireland has worked actively with a number of Israeli NGOs and the recently formed Knesset caucus on the WPS agenda.

WEST AFRICA

Liberia

Liberia made progress in consolidating democracy, peace and stability since the end of the second civil war in 2003 and 2018 marked the final drawdown of the United Nations Mission in Liberia (UNMIL). However, there are aspects of the political structures that remain fragile and many root causes of conflict must be addressed. Challenges affecting poor women and girls are interlinked and complex. GBV is widespread and Ireland has a unique contribution to make in the links between services and response to GBV and primary health services. This is because of our health focus and our specific support to

One Stop Centres¹⁵ in Monrovia. Our engagement in access to information for women and access to justice through our work on rule of law will create opportunities to improve services and responses for survivors. Ireland will also continue to work with international and national partners to research and pilot community-based approaches to prevent GBV and include men and boys as key agents of change. Ireland will also work to increase the role of women and girls as decision-makers at all levels. Following the 2011 cross-learning initiative, Ireland will collaborate with civil society and the Ministry of Gender, Children and Social Protection to promote the continued development of Liberia's second NAP.

Sierra Leone

Ireland's overarching goal is for women and girls to contribute to and benefit from a more resilient and equitable society. This acknowledges the intersecting nature of the WPS Agenda, particularly the importance of empowerment, and the gendered impacts of the links between food insecurity and conflict. Priorities include:

- » improved nutritional status for children under five and pregnant and lactating mothers;
- » education and empowerment of adolescent girls, particularly those coming from lowest income backgrounds, to make informed decisions;
- » empowerment of women to engage with inclusive, accountable and responsive democratic institutions and processes.

Both the acceptance and prevalence of violence against women and girls, including female genital mutilation, is high. Adolescent girls are exposed to risks of violence, forced sexual relations, early marriage and early motherhood. The prevalence of teenage pregnancy poses severe health risks for girls, excludes them from education, and traps families in intergenerational poverty. Ireland champions the rights of teenage girls through advocacy and policy engagement. In line with the priority of the Sierra Leone government to make free, quality education available for all children, Ireland will continue to support girls in their efforts to realise their potential and meaningfully participate in all levels of decision-making.

SUB-SAHARAN AFRICA

South Africa, Zimbabwe and Regionally

South Africa's constitution is one of the most progressive in the world, enshrining a broad range of human rights. Yet challenges in implementation remain, particularly regarding gender inequality. GBV and the greater likelihood of women contracting HIV reflect women's social and economic vulnerability. Given the extent and debilitating effects of GBV, Ireland engages a number of strategic partners and programmes in South Africa, Zimbabwe and regionally. This will influence state and non-state actors to provide better coordinated, more comprehensive and accessible GBV services ensuring support for survivors and strengthening opposition to GBV. The promotion of increased incorporation of conflict sensitive and longer-term development approaches to achieve health outcomes in protracted crisis is a central priority. Across all of the countries of accreditation, Ireland engages with EU Steering Committees on Gender and supports the promotion of NAPs, particularly through the South African Development Community (SADC). South Africa does not have a NAP but its development is ongoing since 2015 and Ireland will support efforts to advance this process.

INTERNATIONAL AND REGIONAL ORGANISATIONS

United Nations

The promotion of WPS is a priority across our multilateral engagement, particularly through our Permanent Missions to the United Nations in New York and Geneva, and in the context of Ireland's candidature to, and prospective membership of, the UN Security Council for the 2021-2022 term. High Level Week at the UN General Assembly and the annual WPS Security Council debate are key opportunities for promotion of the WPS Agenda, although gender equality is mainstreamed across all our multilateral work. Ireland is a member of the WPS Focal Points Network and a number of networks, which also tie into WPS themes, including networks supporting mediation, the prevention of SEA and peace processes. Ireland works in partnership with fellow Member States, civil society organisations and UN entities based in New York and Geneva and UN Women to promote this agenda and to ensure that grassroots women peacebuilders of all ages are included in these fora.

African Union and IGAD

Ireland's engagement with the African Union and the Intergovernmental Authority on Development is led by our Embassy in Addis Ababa. The WPS Agenda has strong roots in Africa and several African Member States played an important role in advancing the adoption of relevant resolutions at the UN, indeed Namibia was president of the UN Security Council when it adopted UNSCR 1325, while South Africa co-sponsored the follow-up resolution UNSCR 1820. The African Union's Agenda 2063, recognises the critical and dynamic connections between gender, development, and peace and security and includes a strong focus on the rights of women and girls, and the importance of achieving gender equality. Ireland's representation to the African Union is committed to supporting the AU's peace and security architecture with a particular focus on mediation and supporting the Office of the Special Envoy for Women, Peace and Security. This will include increasing support for women's networks; lesson sharing from women mediators in Northern Ireland and support to African Member States and Regional Economic Communities in the effective implementation of NAP commitments. Ireland will also continue to support efforts to bring peace and development to South Sudan by working with IGAD. This will include, as a priority, efforts to strengthen women's meaningful participation in ongoing peace and security dialogues.

Monitoring and Evaluation

This NAP will be monitored and evaluated through the following mechanisms.

OVERSIGHT GROUP

An Oversight Group will be appointed by the Minister for Foreign Affairs and Trade to oversee the regular and systematic review of progress on achieving the outcomes, actions, targets and impact across all pillars. The Oversight Group will be independently chaired and its membership will consist of 50% representation from the relevant government departments and state agencies and 50% representation from civil society, academia and independents. All members will have relevant experience and expertise. Government representatives will regularly report to the Oversight Group on their progress on achieving the outcomes in Annex I of the NAP and civil society members will update the Oversight Group of their relevant work. Progress will be outlined in an annual report which will be presented to the appropriate Oireachtas Committee.

MID-TERM REVIEW AND FINAL EVALUATION

A Mid-Term Review of the third NAP will be conducted in 2021 by independent consultants. The results of the Mid-Term Review will be used to update the NAP for the final two years of its implementation. A Final Evaluation, which will analyse the progress achieved throughout the first, second and third NAPs will be conducted at the end of the term of the third NAP.

ALIGNMENT WITH THE CONVENTION ON THE ELIMINATION OF ALL FORMS OF DISCRIMINATION AGAINST WOMEN

The NAP will be integrated into state party periodic reporting obligations under CEDAW and the Universal Periodic Review through coordination of the Oversight Group. Civil society members of the group will be encouraged to shadow report on Ireland's CEDAW obligations under Recommendation 30.

MONITORING FRAMEWORK

The Monitoring Framework (see Annex 1) will be the guiding vehicle through which progress will be measured throughout the duration of this plan. As with all effective monitoring models, indicators need to be specific, measurable and focus on information that is meaningful and relevant to the issue at hand. Furthermore, it is important that baselines are established in order to track progress. Indicators are both quantitative (numerical) and qualitative (categorical) and measure progress against both outputs (activities) and outcomes (the impact of those activities) and how this will be achieved. All actions and indicators are mindful of and integrate those from relevant National Policies such as the National Strategy for Women and Girls, the Migrant Integration Strategy, the Intercultural Health Strategy and gender budgeting with the Departments of Finance and of Public Expenditure and Reform.¹⁶

RISKS AND ASSUMPTIONS

In order to achieve the strategic outcomes of this plan, a number of critical success factors need to be in place. Risks correspond to a potential future event, fully or partially beyond Ireland's control that may (negatively) affect the achievement of results for this plan.

Such factors are:

- » Consistent political and executive support throughout the period of implementation;
- » Ireland is a small country with corresponding resources and implementation of the NAP will require a sustained and increasing budget throughout the lifespan of the plan;
- » Programmes being sufficiently aligned to the eligibility criteria of the Government of Ireland's Funding mechanisms;
- » Establishment of baselines and tracking of funding may be subject to any limitations imposed by the level of functionality of the system;

- » Stakeholders and government actors finding consistent relevance of the NAP within their work and the institutional memory of the NAP process is referenced/utilised;
- » Staffing capacity and capability to oversee and implement the NAP and staffing consistency regarding the Oversight Group Secretariat;
- » The willingness of appropriate stakeholders in the WPS arena to participate;
- » Continued knowledge of the issues that WPS addresses beyond only implementing bodies;
- » A sustained collective engagement from Member States and UN agencies on WPS is maintained throughout the next five years.

These assumptions have been considered in the creation of the actions and indicators in the NAP in order to mitigate risk of inability to achieve the objectives of the plan. They will continue to be revised and taken into consideration throughout the duration of the NAP, particularly during the annual reporting and Mid-Term Review and Final Evaluation.

Annex III: Women, Peace and Security and the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs)

SDG 1: End poverty in all its forms everywhere.

Conflict renders women acutely vulnerable to poverty, with adverse impacts on livelihoods, and destruction of assets such as homes and agricultural land. Poverty in turn exhausts institutions, depletes resources, weakens leadership, and ultimately contributes to insecurity and conflict – with particularly harmful effects on women.

SDG 2: End hunger, achieve food security and improved nutrition and promote sustainable agriculture.

Conflict and hunger are inextricably linked. Food can also be used as a weapon of war. Women and girls are frequently responsible for agricultural production and feeding families and are particularly vulnerable to food insecurity.

SDG 3: Ensure healthy lives and promote well-being for all at all ages.

Access to health care, including sexual and reproductive health services, can be disrupted in conflict and post-conflict settings, with women and girls being at a greater risk of unplanned pregnancy, maternal mortality and contracting sexually transmitted infections, including as a result of conflict-related sexual violence.

SDG 4: Ensure inclusive and equitable quality education and promote lifelong learning opportunities for all.

In conflict settings, the provision of education suffers and girls may face additional obstacles in accessing education due to fear of targeted attacks and the additional caregiving and household responsibilities they must often assume. Educating girls is a foundational requirement for women's empowerment in conflict-affected contexts.

SDG 5: Achieve gender equality and empower all women and girls.

SDG 5 is pivotal to the WPS Agenda and cuts across the other SDGs by recognising that none of the goals can be achieved without gender equality.

SDG 6: Clean Water and Sanitation.

Access to clean water and all forms of sanitation, particularly menstrual health management, is gendered. This is further exacerbated in situation of conflict and flight.

SDG 8: Promote sustained, inclusive and sustainable economic growth, full and productive employment and decent work for all.

Women are more likely to work in unsafe, unpaid, underpaid or insecure work. This is intensified during conflict and flight and often makes them the main economic providers and can increase their vulnerability to exploitation.

SDG 10: Reduce inequality within and among countries.

Inequality, including gender inequality, is a driving factor behind conflict, violence, instability, forced migration, poverty and environmental degradation. The structural factors that cause inequality including discrimination, social, economic and political exclusion and a lack of safe migration options requires a greater focus.

SDG 11: Make cities inclusive, safe, resilient and sustainable.

Displacement from conflict is often closely linked to a rapid increase in urban populations, particularly the development of slums. New forms of conflict are also occurring more frequently in urban settings. Global responses to urbanisation and the changing nature of conflict must be participatory and inclusive.

SDG 13: Take urgent action to combat climate change and its impacts.

Climate change has distinct impacts on women and men while the effects of climate change exacerbate conflict. Climate-related events such as drought threaten food and water supplies, increase competition for these and other natural resources and create civil unrest, potentially contributing to conflict.

SDG 16: Promote peaceful and inclusive societies for sustainable development, provide access to justice for all and build effective, accountable and inclusive institutions at all levels.

Building and sustaining peace and development must include the full and meaningful participation of women and girls. The WPS Agenda is primarily the intersection of SDG 5 and 16.

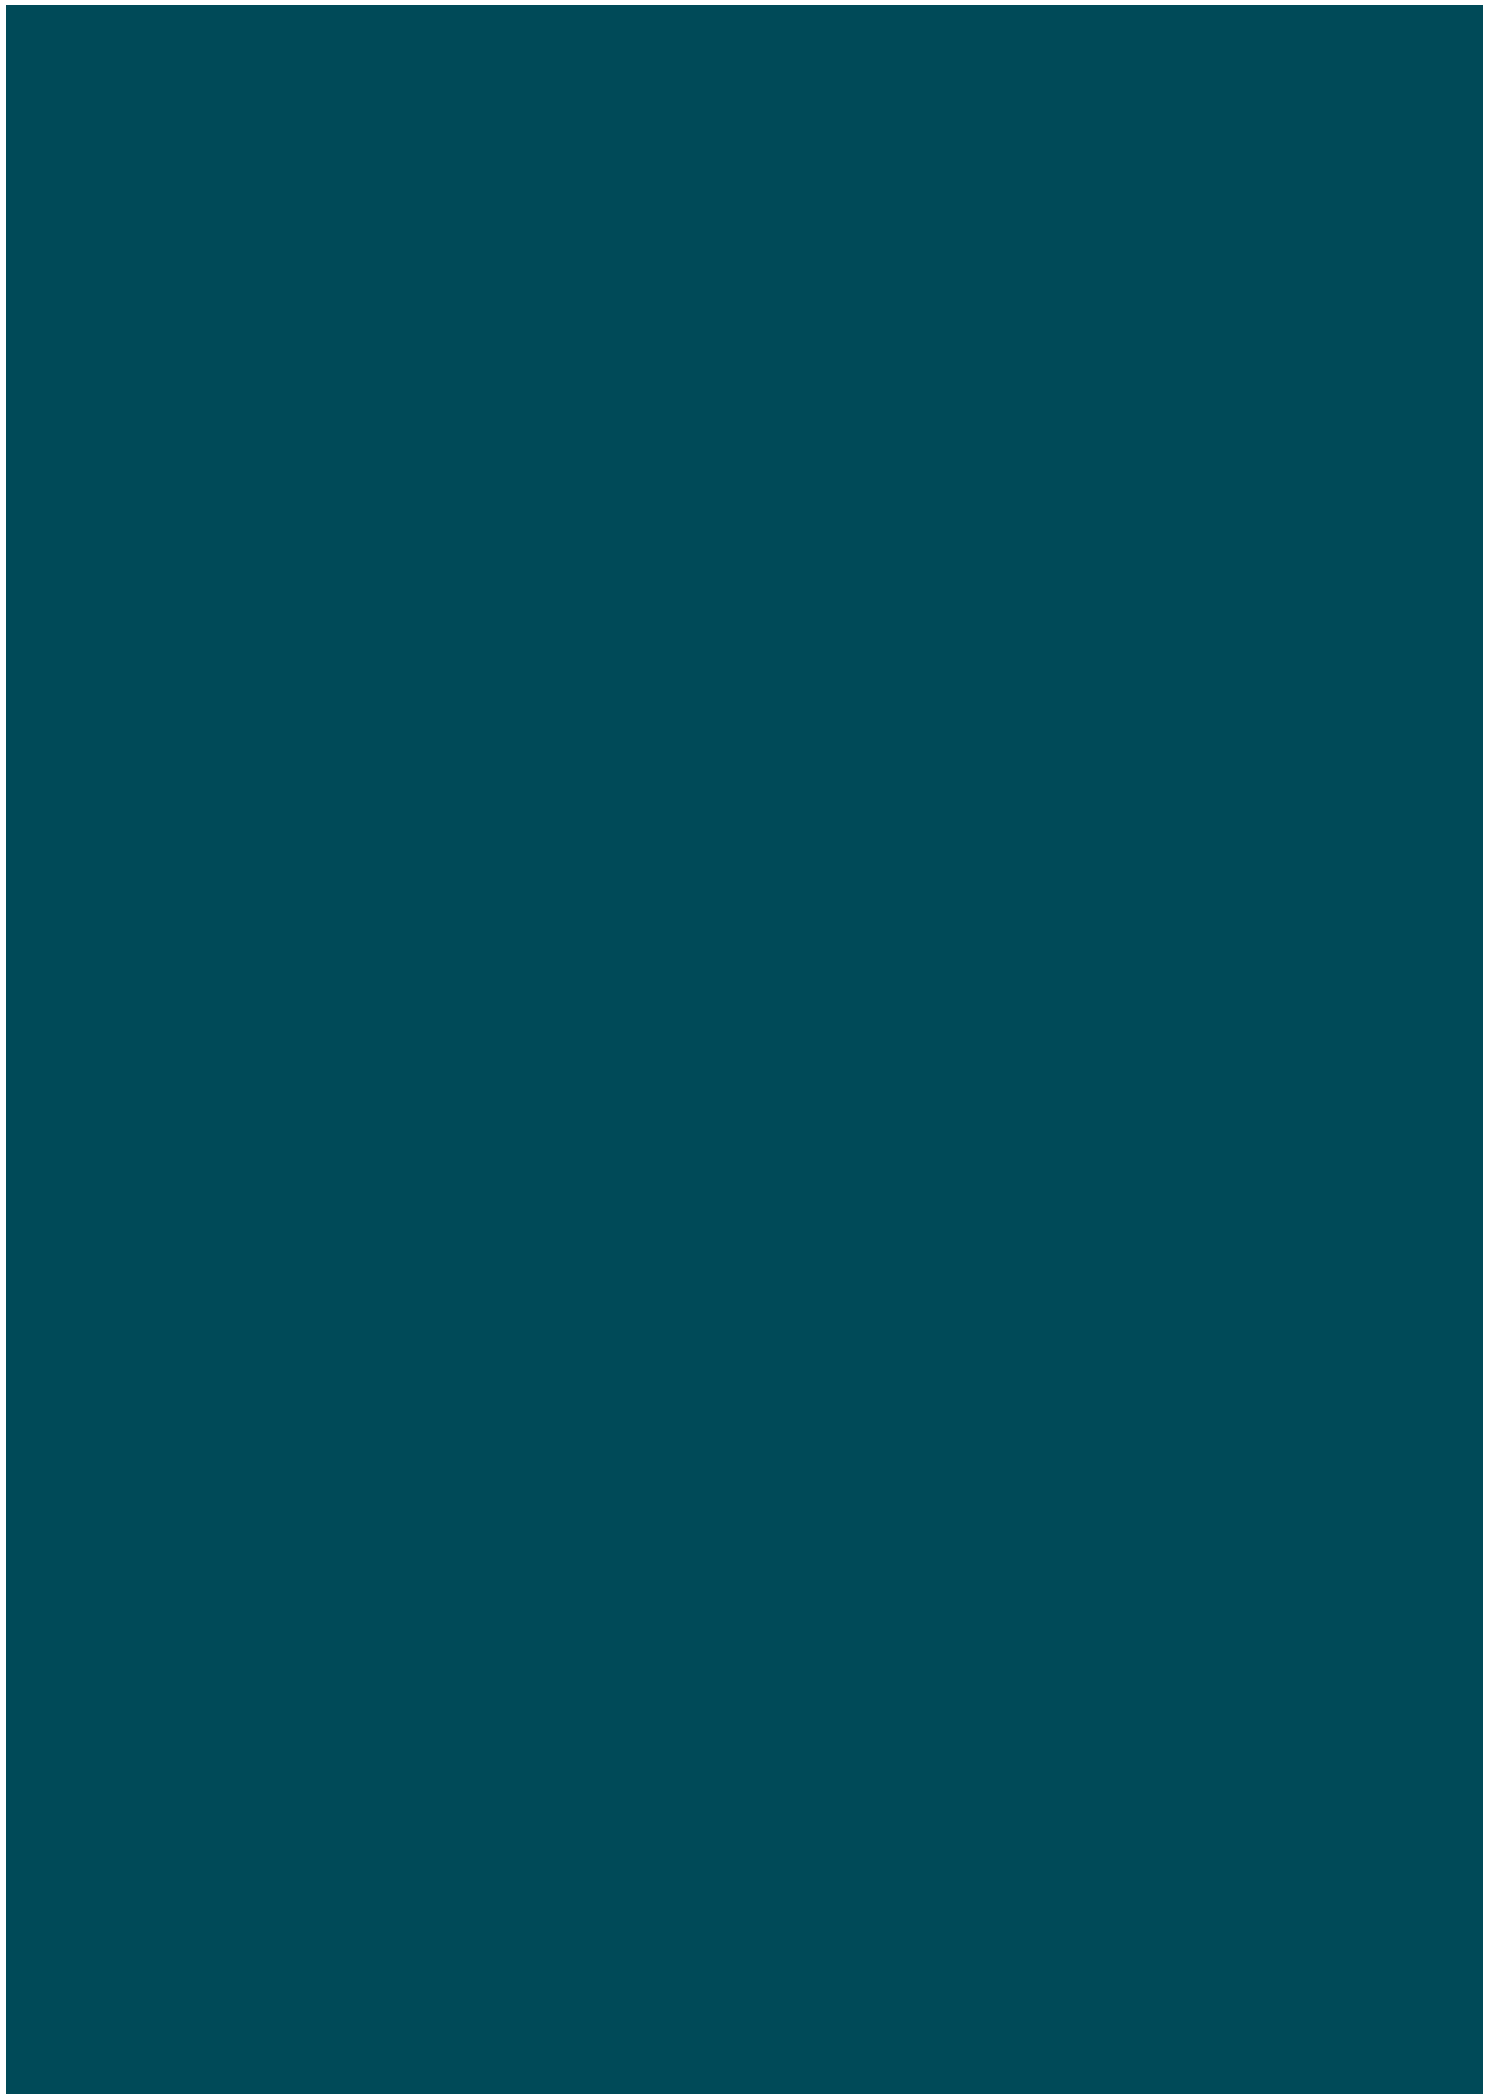

SDG 17: Strengthen the means of implementation and revitalize the Global Partnership for Sustainable Development.

The strengthening of partnerships is essential to achieve both the SDGs and the Women, Peace and Security Agenda. Intensive and systematic engagement with civil society, women and girls affected by conflict as agents of change, governments (including local authorities), local communities, the private sector, the United Nations system, regional bodies, is essential.
